PROGRAM

Erin McKenna, Project Manager for the Transit Oriented Development Feasibility Study, introduced the consultants: David Spillane, Mitch Glass, and Sarah Woodworth. The project began today. They are studying the area surrounding the local train station and how to make improvements that take advantage of the train station and better serve the community. It will be a project lasting approximately one year and will include three public meetings where residents will be encouraged to voice their opinions about how Glenbrook should evolve.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:50. People lingered to speak with the candidates and consultants.

The next GNA meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, January 15, 2014.
